RYAN WANTS TO WIN GAME

This afternoon fandom will be entertained by the Rookie brigade of Frank Chance's Yankees. The New Yorkers will arrive for a two-game series after a very successful barnstorming trip on their way North. Frank Chance will not be with the club, but that will not lessen the attraction. Manager Ryan is anxious to make a creditable showing, and, with this purpose in mind, will send every man in the squad to the front in order to hold back the big leaguers. A victory will not be distasteful, though he is predicting no such result. The game will begin at 4 o'clock. No advance in other than the control of begin at 4 o'clock. No advance in prices will be made. Another park

Sold Out for "Everywoman,"

In spite of its engagement here only ast season for six performances, Henry W. Savage's splendid production of Walter Browne's modern morality play, "Everywoman," drew a large audience of Music yesterday afto the Academy of Music vesterday af-ternoon, and was offered before a house literally sold out last night.

Contrary to the custom prevalent among managers of cheapening their offerings for the second season on the road. Mr. Savage has maintained the massiveness of the production itself, and presents a company which, in some respects, is even more satisfactory than that which appeared in the play season.

H. Cooper-Cliffe, the fine English ctor who was the Nobody of last year, is not missed from the cast, since the role is assumed by Elmer Grandin, a dignified, impressive actor, who reads the lines of the chorus with quite as keen an appreciation of their beauty and quiet cynicism, with fully as clean and clear a method of enunciation, and with even more deepness and richness

The part of Everywoman, played last season by Thais Magrane, was given a most commendable performance last night by Diana Storm. While Miss Storm is somewhat new in the part and stumbled in its lines several times she gave it a certain warmth, anima-tion and, in a word, naturalness, that was lacking in the more statuesque and mature Miss Magrane.

She lacked a little of weight in her denunciatory moments, but more than atoned for that by the appealing quality of her voice and manner when her pilgrimage in quest of King Love seemed likely to end in failure and Patricia Collinge and her charming companions, Beauty and Modesty, are not altogether compensated for in this cast, and but few women on the stage could so completely fill the role of Truth as Marie Wainwright did, but most of the other principal characters are played by the same actors who were seen here last year, and the company as a whole is admirable.

This afterneon, Miss Storm will again play Everywoman, while to-night the part will be done by Edna Porter, who was seen in it yesterday afternoon.

Thomas, Frank Osman, Frank Beckham and Fred Schaaf, whose selection, "Schnitzel Bank," was sung in the most charming style, deserve special mention.

In the olio Messrs, Brewer and Bowers, acrobats, gave a corking good exhibition. When it is said that they are pupils of the Brothers Damm, all is said. Their act is a good one.

Raymond McCann, Lee O'Dell and Billy Burke, from the Maslin-Eacon Minstrels, put on a very amusing farce, "The Book Agent," and Captain Tony Miller and Colonel Tom Booker, supported by the Old South Quartet, lived up to their reputation.

The show will be repeated to-night at the Empire.

While he did not go on, great credit is due Sergeant John C. Weckert, upon whom devolved the work of turning out a perfect show. He is a real minstrel man, a manager, a singer, a juggler, a lion-tamer, a tight-rope walker, an acrobat, a moving picture actor, a comedian, a tragedian, a soldier and the angel of the minstrels. The fact that Weckert was behind it proves that it was a success.
